The choice of professionalization

The Faculty of Legal and Political Sciences (FSJP) is one of the 08 establishments of the University of Dschang (UDs). It started its activities in 1993, from the creation of the Institution. His Dean's Office is located in one of the most recent administrative buildings of the UDs, on the main track of the entrance to Campus A in Dschang, just after the Conference Hall, commonly known as the 1000 amphitheater. essential of the administrative and academic services of the establishment. The old building, located opposite the GIE-UDs, continues to house the heads of the various departments of the Faculty.

Like all classical faculties, the FSJP of the UDs is organized into departments. There are seven (7): the Department of Basic Private Law, the Department of Business Law, the Department of Criminal Sciences, the Department of Internal Public Law, the Department of International and Community Law, the Department of English Law Law and the Department of Political Science. The study regime is aligned with the orientation of higher education in Cameroon so well applied to the University of Dschang, namely the implementation of the LMD (Licence-Master-Doctorate) system. Only, there is a declination in Law in that there exists, before the Licence, a cycle of Capacity which is done in two years, both for Francophones and for Anglophones.

Under the impetus of various Deans since the 1993/1994 academic year, the FSJP has been able to imprint its mark, as much with regard to the training of students as with regard to the influence of the University of Dschang in Cameroon and the stranger. The establishment supervises on average 4,000 Cameroonian and foreign students each year. During the 2019/2020 academic year, these enrollments amounted to approximately 4,200 people, all levels combined. In the second and third cycles (Masters and Doctorate), 184 Master-research theses and professional reports were defended and around thirty Doctorate / Ph.D theses were successfully defended in 2019.

For the supervision of students, the FSJP has a doctoral library well supplied with law. Its fund is regularly renewed thanks to various subscriptions to national and international journals, donations of books generally made by alumni residing in Cameroon and abroad, with the purchase of books produced by renowned teacher-researchers. A very active student association, AMANEF, helps supervise students. Each year, this association distributes awards of excellence to students and raises their awareness of the legal professions. An association of a similar nature, called ALUMNI-FSJP, intends to follow suit, if not to do better. Like other UD students, they benefit from everything that the Center for University Works makes available to the university community of Dschang.

FSJP students are supervised by a total of 89 teacher-researchers, including 31 of masterly rank (10 Full Professors and 21 Lecturers), 44 Lecturers, 27 Assistants and 8 monitors. Alongside these permanent teachers, the Faculty calls on missionary and temporary teachers for in-depth theoretical teaching in certain specialties. The establishment also calls heavily on professionals, especially in the context of professional Bachelor degrees and masters.

PROFESSIONAL TRAINING

1. Bachelor and Master degree in Legal Engineering of Decentralized Territorial Communities

• Presentation of the training

The state crisis has for more than two decades explained the desertion of Cameroon by foreign investors, at the same time as it explained the ever-growing gap between the administration and the citizens. Very early on, the reform of the State in the sense of bringing the citizens closer together was discovered as one of the major conditions of structural adjustment. If our country very early discovered the virtues of administrative decentralization with the municipal law of 1974, it was not until the reform of the fundamental law of 1996 that an irreversible process of constitutionalization of decentralization in Cameroon began. The specializing perspective is favored in order to maximize the learning outcomes and guarantee the quality of training, a pledge of the establishment of human resources effectively intervening in the establishment of a real territorial decentralization in Cameroon, crucible of our political development, economic and social.
